TRIAL
OF
COLONEL A. BURR.

MOTION FOR COMMITMENT.

EXAMINATION OF EVIDENCE.

THURSDAY, Sept. 24.

Robert Wallace, sworn.

Q. Where do you live? A I live in Marietta.

Some time last fall I received a message from Mr. Bl. to come down to the island. I went; It was soon after Mr. Blennerhassett returned from Kentucky. After I had been there some time Mr. Blennerhassett took me into a small room, and said he wished to speak to me privately. He then asked me if I had not heard he was going down the river. I told him that I had. He asked me if I would not go with him. He said he was not then at liberty to reveal the object entirely; but if I would depend on his friendship he would do well for me. He spoke of the Ouachita land, but intimated that there was something else in view. On the same evening there were several young men at Blennerhassett's house from Belpre. They were all requested to join the expedition and go down with him. They were all to furnish themselves with a rifle and blanket. The ——— I had some conversation with Mr and Mrs. Blennerhassett. Among other things, I asked whether government countenanced this expedition; I had heard something from captain Elliot the evening before, that this was an expedition intended against Mexico. Mr. Blennerhassett replied that it was immaterial whether government aided it or not; government was weak; they would have nothing to do with government, unless it opposed the expedition, in which case they would make resistance. Mr. Blennerhassett laughed at my staying at home and spending my life in obscurity behind the counter, it was a dull life: he told me if I would go with him I would have an opportunity to distinguish myself. On the next day I rode up to Marietta with Mr. Blennerhassett, and on the way he was engaging several young men to go down the river with him, offering them lands. Among the rest was one Rattburn a schoolmaster. I told him he was a drunkard & could do nothing towards the settlement of lands. No matter, said Mr. Blennerhassett, when he is brought under good discipline he will make a good soldier, and his allowance will not be large enough to make him drunk. Mr. Blennerhassett was then going up the Muskingum, to see after col. Burr's boats that were building there, and to hurry their finishing.

Mr. Blennerhassett was at my father's house afterwards, and I was in the room when he offered my brother the place of surgeon general. My father told Mr. Bl. he had better give up the enterprize and stay at home on his island; that it was impossible he could succeed; that his force was too small and the opposition too great. Mr. Blennerhassett said that gen. Wilkinson and the army would join him. When I was at the island Mr. Blennerhassett told me, that he expected we should have a little fighting with the Spaniards, but that they were great cowards and would soon run, and leave every thing in our possession. In the month of August Mr. Blennerhassett was at my father's house, and used many arguments to prove that it was the interest of the western states to separate themselves from the union.

Mr. Wirt. Did Blennerhassett speak of Burr? A Yes, I understood he spoke of him as the leader. I recollect to have asked him whether col. Burr was concerned. He answered that he was one of the leaders. He also mentioned general Eaton as one concerned,

Mr. Hay. Did he mention what would be the result to you and himself if the enterprise was to succeed? A He said if we succeeded our fortunes would be made; that if not, he was a ruined man. Q Did he say what he would do in case he met with resistance in his descent down the river? Mr. Blennerhassett said they could land and burn the houses and towns if the people attempted to oppose them? Q What arms did you see on the island? A I saw two or three guns, three blunderbusses, three braces of pistols, a sword and dirk, a keg of powder and some bullets.

Mr. Martin. Were these arms owned by Mr. Blennerhassett for any long time. A Yes. I had seen them some time before.

Cross-Examined.

Mr. Wickham. Did you ever agree to go with Mr. Blennerhassett? A I was undetermined if I should go. I said I was willing to go with my father's consent. Mr. Blennerhassett said he had so much respect for my father as not to wish me to go without it. Q was there any talk of a Spanish war? Mr. Blennerhassett gave some hints of such an event.

Mr. D Woodbridge came into court to explain an observation which had been used on a former occasion. He said that the partnership accounts between him and Mr. Blennerhassett had been settled; from which it might be inferred that all their accounts had been settled. The truth however was, that though their partnership was dissolved, their private accounts were not yet adjusted.

Return J. Meigs, jun.* was then introduced; he enquired whether he should state any thing about the seizing of the boats.

Mr. Hay. No sir, I wish to state particularly what passed between general Tupper and yourself.

Mr Burr. And what is that enquiry to the court?

Mr. Wirt. It is to fortify Jacob Allbright's testimony, I presume that such will be the conclusion if it appear that gen. Tupper has told Mr. Meigs the very things which Allbright has substantially related.

Mr. Hay. ——Has not general Tupper left his affidavit?

Mr. Wickham. I know not but when that shall be produced to the court, it will then be time enough to introduce Mr. Meigs.

Mr. Hay. We have Mr. Meigs's affidavit, and if it be necessary, we shall produce it. Mr. Meigs was then discharged from any further attendance.

NOTE. Mr. Meigs has been a very respectable judge in the territory of Upper Louisiana; and is now a candidate for the gubernatorial chair of the state of Ohio.

Edmund P. Dana, sworn.

I never saw col. Burr but once, previous to my seeing him in this place.

In November last, Mr. and Mrs. Blennerhasset came to my house in Belpre; his object was to purchase cyder. In the course of our conversation, he said that he had been purchasing land in the west in company with col. Burr and others; and that he was going down to settle it. This was about the middle of the day; and my father gave them an invitation to stay to dinner. They stayed; and there was a good deal of conversation during dinner on these subjects. Mr. Blennerhasset stated the particular advantages of the Ouachita land above the rest of the country; that it was near the market, and calculated for the raising of cotton. He said there was a large association for this purpose, and that he wanted young men to go: Those who embarked early if they succeeded in the undertaking would no doubt make their fortunes. I observed to my brother who was sitting with us that if fortunes were so easily made, he had better go. Mr Blennerhassett replied that he wanted such men as we were. He said he did not want to carry us without my fathers consent. My father observed that we were our own men, and might act as we thought proper. I think Mr. Blennerhasset bargained for 5 or 6 barrels of cyder, which he said he was going to carry down the river with him. He invited us to the island where he would give us more particular information of his designs.

A short time after, I was in the orchard gathering apples. Mr. Blennerhasset came to me to talk more of the enterprize down the river. He asked me if I had any intention of going. I said I was unsettled; I would embrace any favorable opportunity to better my situation, and if I knew the object of this enterprize, I could better tell whether I would go or not. I observed that there were some rumours that the plan was unfavorable to government; and if it was that I would have nothing to do with it. He pledged his most sacred honor to me and swore by the honor of a gentlemen, that the plan was not hostile to the government; and he went on to name some characters who he said were concerned; that the association was very extensive, spreading from Maine to Georgia. I asked him to name them. He said col. Burr was one, whose talents he then highly commended. I said if the plan was a lawful one, it was a good one, from the high opinion I had formed of his talents. He said that gen. Wilkinson was to join with his army. He mentioned gen. Jackson of Tennessee, who was then preparing a body of militia (2 or 3,000 I think) and who was ready to join them. He mentioned gen. Dayton. I think I asked him if the Swartwouts of New York were not concerned. (There was a gentleman then at our house by that name.) He said they were. He named a number of other characters, whom I do not recollect.

Mr. Hay. Were you on the island on the night of their departure? A I was. Mr. Bl. told me if I would come over to see him he would shew me a plan of the Ouachita country. Some few days after this I went over to the island. Mr. Bl. was at home, but engaged with some gentlemen who were there. He made no further communication to me, seeming to doubt whether I was seriously disposed towards his plans. I staid only a few minutes. I now recollect that I have omitted part of the conversation with him.—When he said that generals Wilkinson and Jackson were going to join with their troops, I asked him what was this for; if for the settlement of lands they surely were not necessary. He said that there were a great many Indians and Spaniards in that country, whom they must go prepared to resist.

I had no further conversation with him till the 9th or 10th of December, when he sent a servant to know whether he could get 3 or 4 horses to ride to Marietta. I said that he might have all that I had.—About 12 o'clock in the day several gentlemen came; among them were Mr. Blannerhasset, Tyler, and I think Mr. Smith: There were 6 gentlemen. I understood they were going up the Muskingum after the boats. Some time in the afternoon they returned. They rode to the landing opposite the island and sent the horses down. I understood from flying reports that they expected opposition and had returned. Hearing that they were to start that evening, I felt anxious to see their departure and to find out their object.—With 2 young men I went down to the river, found a skiff at the landing and passed over. We landed just above where Tyler's boats lay, went to the house into a large room, where a number of men were collected round the fire, and col. Tyler among them. I told him that I understood they were about to start down the river. We walked out into the north wing of Mr. Blannerhassett's house together, and there a young man by the name of Bent observed to me that he understood from Mr. Blannerhassett I had some intention to join.

Mr Botts objected to this species of testimony. Did Mr. Blannerhassett hear of this conversation afterwards and approve it?

Witness. No.

Mr. Wirt. Who was in company with you?

Witness Mr. Tyler was.

Mr Hay contended that a declaration made in the presence of one accomplice, would bear upon all the rest.

Mr. Botts contended, that if this kind of evidence were admitted, it would be impossible to exclude any source of information or conjecture; newspaper statements or flying reports.

The Chief Justice observed that as he was sitting there in the character of an examining magistrate, where the rules of evidence were not so inflexibly rigid as in a court of justice; and as Tyler was probably a party concerned, he was disposed to hear the testimony.

Witness. I replied, that when I knew the object of the expedition and liked it, I would then determine; that Mr. Blannerhassett had been telling me a story about settling land, in which I did not place much confidence. Colonel Tyler observed that it was a fact they had made the purchase, but they had other objects in view. I told him, that I had my own opinion on the subject; that I supposed their operations lay towards Mexico. If they were, I felt strongly disposed to be friendly towards them. There was at that time a strong talk about a Spanish war. He observed, that I was not much mistaken in my opinion. I told him, that since the subject was first mentioned to me by Mr. Blannerhassett, I had been at some pains to examine the geography of that country; that I found the people there very numerous; and that his handful of men would not be able to make any impression on them. Colonel Tyler observed, that with 500 well armed and well disciplined men, he thought they would be able to effect it. I asked him if they had attended to the different routes through that country. He said they were not going for plunder or rapine; but to relieve the distressed inhabitants of Mexico; and that they had been invited for five years past. I think I observed then (though I am not very positive in the expression) that if that was their object and they would avow it, they would get three men to join them for one that they got now. I think his answer was that it was not politic that their military movements should be divulged or that their object should be known to any but their leaders; that the Spaniards would get information of it and fortify themselves.

The conversation ended here, I wished them success in their enterprize; and told them that if I thought proper to join them, it would be at some point down the river; I was not then ready. Col. Tyler withdrew into the chamber. Mr. Blennerhasset observed, that they were going to start that night; that the Legislature had passed a law which he thought unconstitutional; that he did not apprehend an arrest but on account of the day. He said something about his going that he was sorry after living so long among us, to be forced to go down in the night; but he was afraid of delay; he was afraid of being stopped, and the season was so far advanced that the river might freeze up and he could not go down. About 9 o'clock I bid them adieu and left the island.

Cross-Examined.

Mr. Botts. Did Blennerhasset and Tyler speak of a Spanish war as an event that would certainly take place? A They did. I think col. Tyler said there was a strong prospect of war, and if there was one, he would be there ready to join in it.

David Gilmore sworn.

Mr. Bl. was in Marietta at the latter end of October with gen. Tupper. Mr Bl. asked me, if I was the person who gave tuition in Marietta. After a short introduction, he observed that he was about to descend the Ohio and go up the Red river, to make a settlement; that he supposed the accumulations I might make from my instructions were not adequate to what I might make with him. He would like to have me go with him; that he was going to settle a new country, which would be advantageous to those, who would volunteer to go round to that settlement. He mentioned the fertility of the country; the advantages of a market that was near to it not far from N. Orleans: He thought the prospects were so promising and flattering that I could not hesitate a moment to determine in favour of going. I said, if I knew the object, and was certain of benefitting myself, I would have no objections to going. He then observed, that Mr. Belknap was a fine and promising young man; that he stood high in his estimation and he would give me the same privileges as Mr. Belknap would derive. That evening he insisted very urgently upon my going down the river with him. I wanted time to consider; but that if he would make any engagements on which I could rely, I was willing to join. I said I would call at his island on the next Saturday. We walked to Mr. Woodbridge's, and he made enquiries if I was acquainted with surveying. I said if I could get any thing in that way, I would go; but I had heard of other objects being in view.

Mr. Hay. Did you press him to disclose the real object of his plan? A I did. He referred me to Mr. Belknap; and if I concluded to go, he would let me know more when I called on him. Q Did you see Mr. Belknap? A I did; but I had not time enough to enter into the merits of the cause. Afterwards I visited Mr. Bl. and he asked me whether I had determined to go down the river. I told him that I had not yet had sufficient time to talk with Mr. Belknap. I asked him what were the prospects and what were the discoveries of the objects he would make to me, and then I would tell him whether I would go or not. He said I must engage first and then he would tell me. Mr. Blennerhassett seemed willing to say very little on the subject and seemed rather to consider me as a spy. I wanted some assurances, and perhaps intimated that I wanted every thing to be put on paper. I told him I had heard they would bear the expences of the people back, and I think he said that that would be very unreasonable. I made some enquiries as to their numbers and he said that some were coming down the river from Pittsburg, enough to furnish crews to the boats that were building on the Muskingum; I think he mentioned two hundred. He mentioned gen. Eaton as engaged. I asked him whether he expected three or four thousand men down the river. He said he could not tell. I asked him if he expected one thousand—— He could not inform me. He observed that it was necessary for every person who descended the river to carry arms.—I asked him the reason; and he said that there were a number of Spaniards or Indians on the Red river, who might attack them if they were not armed. He then observed, that he would prefer rifles to common fowling pieces.

Cross-Examined.

Did any person go from your part of the country, but Mr. Bl-? A. No one from Marietta.

Mr. Hay here offered commodore Truxton's affidavit, but the Chief Justice remarked that he had very full notes of his testimony, and the counsel for the accused were willing to admit these notes but not the affidavit.

Monday Aug. 24, 1807, 4th year.

The ceremony of the palace is, in addressing yourself to his excellency the president, to give him the title of My Lord, the same title is also to be used when writing to him.

His excellency the president announces to the army the arrival of news from Europe the most happy for the state of Hayti, and he has selected from it the following extract of an official dispatch addressed to the government.

"I announce to you officially that the British government recognizes his excellency the president Henry Christophe for the Chief of the government of Hayti, and that it is determined to contribute to aid and establish his supremacy."

Great quantities of powder, muskets, and cartouch boxes, woollen cloth, hats, and articles of equipment of every kind, are daily arriving within our ports; and the government has the satisfaction to see that its solicitude and its efforts for the equipment of the army are crowned with the most complete success; it will attend in a few days to fulfilling all its wants of that description.

Done at head quarters at the Cape, 24th of August, 1807, 4th year of independence.

HENRY CHRISTOPHE.

In the absence of the chief of the general staff of the state. The brigadier of the armies attached to the general staff.

TUESDAY, October 13.

The secretary of the navy returned to Washington on Wednesday last.

Intelligence has been received from the Bay of All-Saints, that the English having attempted an attack upon Buenos Ayres, were repelled by the Spaniards, commanded by General Linieres; that they lost 1200 men, and were driven under the walls of Monte-Vido, which was afterwards blockaded by the Spaniards. [Baltimore American.

HANSE TOWNS.

Among the unauthenticated reports of the day, is this, that Bonaparte means to restore the Hanse Towns to their ancient importance. It is said there are to be 13 of them, that they are to keep a fleet, and that even one or perhaps two French ports are to be admitted to the league. London paper.

A letter from Bourdeaux of August 30, says, "There is an embargo on Portuguese vessels, and troops are marching through here daily, it is said for that country. Our markets are improving. We yesterday refused 48 sous for tolerable St. Domingo Coffee. Cotton has risen very much. Louisiana was placed yesterday as high as 237 50. Potashes and bees wax in demand. Sugars are heavy, but as the fall approaches we expect a demand. Brandies and wines are fallen."

COMMUNICATION.

Gaylord Griswold's Letter.—This letter has been frequently referred to by the Editor of the Aurora, in such a manner as to induce his readers to believe that it was of recent date, and written with a view to promote the late plans of Burr in the west, whatever they may have been. Although this is not positively stated, yet it is so strongly insinuated as to have the desired effect. Many of the less intelligent believe, that in saying "the Judiciary is with Burr," the letter alluded to the late conspiracy."

The fact is, if such a letter was ever written by Mr. G. it was in 1804, when Burr stood a poll for governor of New-York. At this time many federalists felt anxious for his election, believing it would promote the interest of their cause. The influence of the unequalled and ever to be lamented HAMILTON, the boast of his country, and the genius of his age—prevented Burr's election, and was the cause of the mournful catastrophe that followed, which federalists are neither disposed to forget nor forgive. Time has proven that Hamilton well understood the character of his political opponent, and was correct in dissuading federalists from supporting a man every way unworthy of their confidence. Since this period, federalists have had nothing to do with Burr, they considered him the murderer of their best friend, and viewed him as an object of detestation. But much as they abhor the man and his principles, they are not willing that the constitution and the laws should be trampled under foot in order to punish him; nor can they, with indifference, hear base insinuations thrown out against an upright judge, who had the firmness to give legal opinions. No exceptions have been taken to the soundness of these opinions—no reasons given to prove them otherwise; but pitiful allusions have been made, with a view to make unfavorable impressions as to the motives of the Chief Justice; and to assist in producing this effect, an old letter is lugged in, that has no more relation to the subject than Mr. Jefferson's letters to Mazzei, Tom Paine, and Callender.

It will, however, require a more powerful attack to shake the confidence, the more enlightened repose in a judge of sterling integrity, whom they "delight to honor"—a judge who will never "mistake the shouts of a mob for the trumpet of fame"—and who, as a sound lawyer, an eloquent statesman, and a lucid historian, has not a superior in our country.—Democrats think they have a fine mark, and are very industrious in shooting; but as yet they have only discovered their disposition to hit, without being able to effect it. [Washington Fed.

☞ We are are desired to state, that a Stone is placed in the hands of Dr. Ott, which possesses the wonderful power of extracting poison of every kind. This Stone will be used under the direction of Dr. Weems, and without charge. It was brought from India by a gentleman of New York, who purchased it from a native, after having seen the efficacy of its power demonstrated in extracting the poison of a scorpion that had been permitted to bite the then owner. The owner of this Stone dining in company with some gentlemen who were conversing on the peculiar power of a stone owned by a lady in Virginia, related the above account, and has since most generously sent his stone to a gentleman in town, to be used for the benefit of such of his fellow-citizens as may be so unfortunate as to require it. The Stone is black, about an inch in length, and in shape somewhat like a bean. [Ibid.

Ship Argo, Lockyer, of and from Philadelphia, to Havanna, was cast away on the 17th Sept. about 3 leagues to the eastward of Little Isaac rock. On the 19th the crew and passengers left the ship in the boats, when one of them drifted into the Gulph stream, where she she was fallen in with by the ship Comet, captain Dixey, having the hon. Daniel Clarke, M. C. owner, on board; who, on receiving information that another boat was drifting about, cruised for her three days, when the crew were found upon the great Isaac rock.—To this humane and generous act of Mr. Clarke, are the crew and passengers indebted for their lives, nor can we bestow too much applause upon a man who will for 3 days sail out of his course to rescue his fellow creatures from misery and death.—Captain Lockyer and crew, and Messrs. Wharton, Courtland & Parry, passengers, arrived at Charleston on the 28th ult. in the Comet.
